Tax recent riots at Chungking are undoubtedly most discreditable to the authorities of that city. Nine Mission establishments, the British Consular Agency residence, and a large amount of property belonging to native Christians have been wantonly destroyed. From the different accounts that have come to hand, it is abundantly evident that the local authorities did not take any effectual steps to stop the riots, and, to native buyers for sums aggregating under if anything, gave encouragement to the rioters. The fine pile of buildings called the Chan-yuen-tang, belonging to the Roman Catholic Mission, only recently erected at a two new steamers to ply between Bhame and cost of nearly Tis. 20,000, was totally wrecked, and all the foreigners were obliged to leave the port. Fortunitely no loss of life was caused to the foreigners, but Mr. Bounns, H. B. M.'s Consular Agent, was pelted and injured, and some of the ladies of the Missions were insulted. The local Magistrate Kwok issued a proclamation, of which the Shanghai Mercury gives the following translation:

I am aware that it has been decroed by His Imperial Majesty, the Emperor, to protest the Missionaries. who have come to spread the gospel, as is provided for in the treaty, and I have frequently received official despatches to the same effect, which neither officials dare to riolate nor people to disobuy.

To-morrow, at Noon.

The P. M. steamer City of Rio arrived here last night from San Francisco after a long passage, the American mail of the 10th ult. being close at her heels. The following telegrams are taken from Californian papers :-MR. PARNELL AT PLYMOUTH.

London, 28th June. Parnell spoke to-night at Plymonth. LONDON, 28th June. When the case of Cyrus Field against Labouchers, the editor of Truth, for libel was called for hearing, the Attorney General, on behalf of Labouchers, withdrew the plea of justification and expressed Labouchere's regret for publishing the article, and stated that he and Sir Henry James. Field's counsel, had agreed upon the amount that would be paid by Labouchere in satisfaction of the costs and asked the Judge to discharge the jury. It is understood that for several days La bouchere's counsel has been wanting to have it settled by his making an apology and retraction and not paying snything for costs. This Field refused to accept.

THE "GALATEA." NEW YORK, 28th June. A special from Southampton says :-- The Ga batea sailed this afternoon in magnificent sunshine, and a favourable but light breeze. Lieuten ant Honn intends to cross snugly, giving the 'falatea for her passage' twenty-five days as an outside limit. He expressed himself surprised that the approaching coutest had thus far excited so little interest in English yachting circles. On Shanghal.-He admitted that last summer the Galates was in bad form and in improper trim, and had a badracing outfit. "But," he added, "since then some alterations have been made, and her eight tons of catside lead had produced favourable results."

OTTAWA, 28th June. It is officially learned that no change has taken place in the policy of the Dominion Government in reference to the protection of Canadian fisheries in lieu of a less vigorous enforcement of the law. The recent circular to Collectors of Customs was merely to make plain certain matters of interpretation. It is now, as it has always been, the policy of the Gavernment that any United States fishing vessel found fishing or preparing to fish, or known to have fished in Canadian waters, shall be seized at once and without warning. The twenty-four hours' warning is applicable solely to United States fishing vessels found hovering within the limits.

DISCOVERY OF A VOLCANO IN CANADA. New York, 29th June. An Ottawa dispatch to the Sun reports that five hunters, just returned from the Maniton river district, Northwest Territory, report the discovery of a smothered volcano in the Maniton range, fifty miles south of the Canadian Pacific from Brule. They found the streams so hot that fish were killed. The atmosphere was also very warm and the slightest exertion caused perspiration. After climbing up the thickly wooded sides of the mountain for two or three hundred feet, the hunters were forced to return, as the air was suffocating. The janimals had left their retreats, birds steered clear of the locality, and not a living thing was to be seen. The earth was dry and cracked with the subterranean heat. Dead snakes without number were discovered. The heat, instead of diminishing, was found to increase the higher they went. up the mountain-side. The cracks in the earth widened and new ques appeared, and the locality became uninhabitable. The theory is that the bitumisons coal, in which this mountain range is known to be rich, has by some phenomenal means become ignited a vast and smouldering mass far down in the mountain's heart, making a caldron of the Maniton river bed. ...

EXTRACT.

THE ETHICS OF NOISE. Refinement and noise do not often go hand in hand, although, of course, the conclusion is not to be deduced that making a noise implies want of refinement. We know that " quiet to quick bosoms is a hell," and it may be a little difficult for a visitor to the Paris Bourse, or to the London Stock Exchange, or to a football field during the last five minutes of an exciting game, to realise that the fearning, raging, shouting, gesticulating individuals before him can at any time be soher, demure, and quiet-living. But such exceptions only serve to test the general rule that, whether we regard nations or individuals, the present time or the mist, noise and barbarism are co-existent. When the Spanish and Italian Ambassadors came from their own dignified and highly refined courts to that of England in the sixteenth century, they invatiably remarked upon the noisy proclivities of our forefathers. Elizabethan Englishmen, it was said, were "rastly fond of great noises that fill the ear, such as the firing of cannon, drums, and the ringing of bells." Elizabeth herself was fond of noise, and never dined without the accompaniment of a loud hand of music-a taste she doubtless shared with most of her great subjects, for we find the Minstrels' Gallery to be an invariable appendage to their banqueting balls. By degrees, however, we solvered down until it may be said that we are the most silent and quiet living of European people, a distinction which we may attribute to refinement, but which foreigners put down to our insular hauteur and reserve. That barharian existence was intolerable, whether is peace of in war, without noise might be pro ved by endless examples. The after-life mythology of all rude nations-from the Valhalia of the Scandinavians to the Happy Hunting Ground of the North American Indians, is associated with noise, as the highest possible form of happiness, and this contrasts significantly with the notion of eternal rest which marks our own conception and that of refined Pagans. Even in war we find noise playing two very different parts, according to the civilisation or the barbarism of the combatants. The Roman shout and the British cheer are mere expressions of enthusiasm and exultation, but the slogan of the old Highlanders, the war whoop of the Irish Kernes, the yells of the Britons and Gauls, which so affrighted the horses of Cosar, were regarded as essential parts of the offensive armoury of the warriors. To this days Chinese general looks upon the introductory howl of his advancing column as being equal to a volley, and those who took part in the campaign of 1860. may remember the melodramatic character of the Chinese line of battle, its hows and spears and shields, and the "braves" who led the way howling and heating tom-toms, in the firm belief that the foreign devils would be affrighted and driven to their boats.

. If we "examine the ceremonial usages of nations we shall find the same difference in the various associations of noise. The shricking, the yelling ethe dancing the gashing with knives, which are accompaniments of the religious ceremonies of Dahomey and of Juggernaut, are exactly what took place before the figures of Dagon and Ammon in the days of Israel. Noise, with all barbarians, would seem to be symbolic of the dignity of religion and severaignty. But when we travel northward and oastward we find silence and dignity associated naturally with each other. The Mahomedan prays in silence, and the continual preservation of a speechless, motionless, demannant, even in everyday life, gains for the bearded Oriental far more admiration and respect than by his real character be is entitled to. Conversation to him is distanteful, exertion contamptible, and the remark of the Shah of Persia, when he Was first introduced to an European bailroom, may be remembered as one of surprise that the folk whirling before him were doing for their own pelectation what in his country was only done by paid hirelings. The irrepressible animal activity of the Englishman is still a puzzlo to dusky natives, who are unable to associate the running about after a bit of leather under a broiling sun with the dignity of a great commercial empirefounding nation, and who cannot comprehend how people who apread railways and telegraphs wherever they go, and seem to be possessed of all the secrets of nature, can derive pleasure in exerting themselves over a pastime almost to exhaustion.

Noise to the Chinaman is detestable, except as an ally in the battlefield. He will gabble and gesticulate fighting over a sixteenth per cent, brokerage in a transaction, but away from the strife of dollar-making his delighis to realise as nearly as possible the medita tive serenity and impassiveness expressed in the features of his gods and philosophers The Japanese, called the French of the East. from themany points of resemblance between them, invariably associate silence and dignit in all matters of State or religion. The old Mikados were never supposed to be seen, an only spoke to their intimates; and the statue of Buddha, so familiar to us sufficiently express the native notion concerning religious dignity. A Chinaman or a Japanese re ceives insuit or punishment with the sam frigid calmness. A box on the ear of a China "boy" produces no visible alteration in the expression of his countenance. The Japanese gentleman condemned to what we call "bappy despatch," merely bows his head without uttering a word. Among Europeans the French is the most noise-loving nation. Two Frenchmen over their drink will make more noise than a drag load of British excursionists... Even the Londoner, who is so inured to the peculiar roar of his own metropolis that he does not hear it, is almost bewildered by the deafening clatter and jungle of the Parisian streets, and Paris is now a quiet capital compared with what it was under the Empire, when it was found impossible for a corporal'e guard to move from one post to another without the accompaniment of a rattling drum. But assuredly in the case of the Parisians the continual presence of noise does not imply the absence of refinement : it is simply a peculiar national method of -giving vent to certain characteristics, just as our insular peculiarity is to appear unmoved and emotionless under all circumstances. Noise, indeed, is part and parcel of the Frenchman's existence. We very much doubt if it has ever entered the heads of the householders who dwell about the Place de l'Europe, just where the traffic of the Western Bailway is thickest, to enter a vigorous protest against the incessant whistling which goes on day and night under their windows, similar to that which is being now rightly urged by the inhabitants of the Addison-road neighbourhood. There is not the smallest resemblance between the Frenchman's notion of recreation after work and our own. If he is wearied with the noise and bustle of Paris, he only exchanges it for the noise and bustle of another Paris by the sea. To bury himself in a quiet country neighbourhood, to explore a distant, silent world of nature, is generally distasteful to him, and contrary to his dearest notions of recreation and recuperation. The English definition of refinement is comprised in the word quietness. A man impresses us as a gentleman who is as quiet in his manner and his talk as in his dress, and we sneer at poor 'Arry who, when walking with a friend, finds it necessary to talk to him as loudly as if he were at the other end of the street. Indeed, in our admiration of quietness as a personal charac-
